

However, there was some controversy about so-called licensed “raves” under provisions in the Licensing Act 2003 which came into force in November 2005.

These allow people to get temporary event notices for gatherings of up to 499 people for events lasting up to four days.

The licensed events could involve the sale of alcohol, and while the police have to review the application and object if they consider that crime and disorder would result, there is no mechanism for the general public to object. The Government is keeping this area of law under review.

These provisions would not apply to the kind of illegal raves covered by the 1994 Act, which by definition are unlicensed.

Mr. Simon Cordell states that the ASBO is disproportionate and it prevents him from engaging in lawful business.

The ASBO prevents Mr. Simon Cordell from applying for licenses to hold events.

The Appellant will state that whilst he is subject to an ASBO he will be prohibited from applying for any entertainment license and any license application will automatically fail and therefore this is disproportionate.

Mr. Simon Cordell has designed a business plan, this creates community events leading to an international festival and that sets out clearly the plans for events including marketing, safety, stalls etc and also specifically refers to co-operating with the police.

The ASBO prevents any applications from being successful.

Mr. Simon Cordell states that he has never been involved in the organization of an illegal rave as defined under section 63 of the CJPOA 1994.

Mr. Simon Cordell State’s; “that he was not rude to police, but does feel like he can not even go out for the day, with some of his friends, without getting stopped and searched by members of the police.”

Mr. Simon Cordell State’s; The Asbo application was created in the understanding that by pc Steve Elsmore and other officers acting in such a manner of the claims listed within this document and or by allowing other officers to use his id logging to gain such wrongful and illegal convictions they did do so upon oath to the legal services, new Scotland yard London sw1h obg Reference number L/107087/sag and stated that they was sure that the defendant Mr. Simon Cordell was responsible for the acts to which particulars had been given, in respect to the complaints made and developed by them self’s which are all concealed within the Asbo application, in turn knowingly and deliberately while intentionally misusing his and their powers of conduct, while and with complete disregard for regulations such as the NSIR national standards incident report 2011, to aid in a manner to
